考研英语真题 2003年text3第1段

[In recent years, railroads have been combining with each other, merging into supersystems, causing heightened concerns about monopoly.] As recently as 1995, the top four railroads accounted for under 70 percent of the total ton-miles moved by rails. Next year, after a series of mergers is completed, just four railroads will control well over 90 percent of all the freight moved by major rail carriers.

考研英语真题 2003年text3第2段

Supporters of the new supersystems argue that these mergers will allow for substantial cost reductions and better coordinated service. Any threat of monopoly, they argue, is removed by fierce competition from trucks. But many shippers complain that for heavy bulk commodities traveling long distances, such as coal, chemicals, and grain, trucking is too costly and the railroads therefore have them by the throat.

考研英语真题 2003年text3第3段

The vast consolidation within the rail industry means that most shippers are served by only one rail company. Railroads typically charge such “captive” shippers 20 to 30 percent more than they do when another railroad is competing for the business. Shippers who feel they are being overcharged have the right to appeal to the federal government's Surface Transportation Board for rate relief, but the process is expensive, time consuming, and will work only in truly extreme cases.

Railroads ^{U. 证实; 证明 - 合理} justify rate ^{偏见} discrimination against captive shippers ^{因为} on the grounds ^{长期来看} that in the long run it reduces everyone's cost. If railroads ^{垄断} charged all customers the same average ^{平均的; 普通的} rate, they argue, shippers ^{抱怨者} who have the option ^{选项} of switching to trucks or other forms of transportation ^{转换; 切换} would do so, leaving ^{离开; 留下; 使得} remaining ^{剩余的} customers to shoulder the cost of keeping up the line. It's ^{理论} theory ^{经济学家} to which many economists subscribe, ^{订阅; 赞同; 赞成} but in practice it often leaves ^{繁荣} railroads in the position of determining ^{失败} which companies will flourish and which will fail. "Do we really want railroads to be the arbiters of who wins and who loses in the marketplace?" asks Martin Bercovici, a Washington lawyer who frequently ^{代表} represents shipper.

Many captive shippers also worry they will soon be hit with a round of huge rate increases. The railroad industry as a whole, despite its brightening ~~fortuning~~ fortunes, still does not earn enough to cover the cost of the capital it must invest to keep up with its surging traffic. Yet railroads continue to borrow billions to acquire one another, with Wall Street cheering them on. Consider the $10.2 billion bid by Norfolk Southern and CSX to acquire Conrail this year. Conrail's net railway operating income in 1996 was just $427 million, less than half of the carrying costs of the transaction. Who's going to pay for the rest of the bill? Many captive shippers fear that they will, as Norfolk Southern and CSX increase their grip on the market.
